tered the sick room this morning just before half past seven the fever had untirely disappeared. The expectoration, which had been most abundant during the night, was considered by the professor to be somewhat better. The injections administered by Dr. Andrea Amici in the course of the night had produced the desired effect of keeping up the strength of the patient's heart, although the weakness of the Pope had been increased by the rertlessness caused by the slight fevurishness in the earlier part of the night. Later in the day he again was feverish, while his

The Pentiff was this morning able to retain some nourishment. He greatly enjoyed some yolks of eggs beaten up alternately in Marsala wine and old brandy, which makes a kind of cream both nutritious and light and much liked by Italians.

Prof. Marchiafava gave a fresh pre-scription this forenoon aiming at facili-tating expectoration still further, as he leared that what the Pope had taken so far might have affected his digestive from which he has suffered. The pro-fessor resommended complete rest and extreme care, saying: "Each patient must above all be his own physician."

There is no denying the fact, however, that the feeling of optimism regarding the Pope's recovery has changed to one of grave anxiety, in the knowledge that each recurring relapse withdraws something from the vital forces of the Holy Father.

The temperature of the Pope, which throughout almost the whole day remained at 97 degrees, in itself indicating depression and weakness, rose in the early evening to 100 and later to 100.
